Guggenheim Museum, Bilbao, Spain

One of architecture's most groundbreaking designs, built in 1997, the museum reignited the city's economy, and placed Bilbao in the international art and tourism spotlight. From the river it resembles a ship, while its shimmering titanium skin evokes the scales of a fish.

Erasmus Bridge, Rotterdam, Netherlands

A combined cable-stayed and bascule bridge, with hardly any straight angles, the 802m bridge spans the Maas river linking the north and south of the city. It has a 139m-high steel pylon, secured with 40 cables. The shape of the pylon gave the bridge its nickname, 'The Swan'.

The Opus, Dubai, UAE

The Opus by Zaha Hadid, in Dubai's Business Bay district, is an architectural wonder. A giant glass cube with a 'carved' central void, the hotel is actually two separate towers, joined at top and bottom by an asymmetric, three-storey bridge, to create the front-facing façade.

CapitaSpring, Singapore

Orthogonal lines, lush greenery and contrasting textures define this high-rise. The vertical lines are pulled apart to allow views into the green oases blooming from the building and rooftop 'sky garden'. With 80,000 plants, it underpins Singapore's status as a garden city.

Harbin Grand Theatre, Heilongjiang, China

The sinuous design of this performing arts centre for Harbin Cultural Island, swathed entirely in white aluminium panels, blends in with the harsh landscape, swooping and swirling like a snowdrift. The interior achieves harmony with white walls, skylights and tons of timber.

Azabudai Hills Mori JP Tower, Tokyo, Japan

The Mori JP Tower measures 325.2m, Japan's tallest building on completion. With curving edges and a crown resembling flower petals, it is part of a 'modern urban village', a series of low-rise buildings amidst lush greenery, with a central square in central Tokyo.
